COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course is designed to be a gateway to the English major. It reviews the areas students can focus on within current-day English studies and examines the way such basics of academic argument as thesis, evidence, and structure are applied to various types of academic essays. It then turns their attention to three such focus areas: (a) writing critically about Linguistics, (b) writing critically about Literature and (c) writing critically about Translation. Throughout the course, students will get hands-on practice with planning out, researching, and (re)writing intellectually sophisticated essays of the kind that they will be expected to write in upper-level courses within the major.

REQUIREMENTS AND GRADING

Class Preparation and Participation
I expect everyone to come to class fully prepared to discuss the material. Preparation includes reading the material, taking detailed notes, and noting down questions. As you are reading each of the assignments try to think what the main argument of the reading is and how the author arrives at such a conclusion. Engage with the author in such a way that as you read, try, to also respond in your mind, or by taking notes, to what she or he says. Excellent participation involves regular, thoughtful contributions to discussions: expressing your understanding of the material, and developing and thinking critically about your own positions. Some of the material that we will read makes for a lively class discussion; while disagreement is expected disrespect will not be tolerated.

Attendance
Missing any class, coming in late to class, or leaving early will all detract from the final grade; if you do miss a class, you are still completely responsible for knowing what was covered in class that day and for finding out if there were any assignments given. Please call another student in the class to find out what you missed.

Note: The use of cell phones is strictly prohibited during class time. Your phones must be switched off while you are in class unless there is an extremely serious reason for you to keep them on.

Papers
There will be three papers in this course geared towards helping you understand and think critically about the readings and films. Additional information and specific guidelines for each of your assignments will be given to you as the semester progresses.

Late Paper Policy
All papers assigned for this course must be submitted on the dates, times and places indicated on your syllabus and assignments. No email submissions will be accepted unless you have checked with me in advance. Failure to meet deadlines will result in a reduction of your overall grade. No exceptions will be made. In cases of illness or other such unforeseeable circumstance please contact me and provide the necessary documentation.
Researcher’s/Writer’s Journal
You should (continue) keep (ing) a journal (AS A WORD FILE) throughout the semester in which you should note down: (a) ideas that are generated in your mind or critical questions you want to ask as a result of your thoughtful engagement with the readings; (b) sources (books, articles, authors, films, databases, internet sites, manuals etc.) you may want to explore further; (c) important tips about research and writing you need to remember; but most importantly please provide (d) annotations of all books, articles, poems, plays, short stories, novels etc. that you read and/ films that you view. Please date each entry and give full bibliographical information for all of your sources. Keeping a journal will help you considerably in developing as a writer, thinker and researcher.

Academic Integrity
Plagiarism is a serious academic offence. It involves stealing other people’s ideas and presenting them as your own. Some examples of plagiarism are: copying another’s work, word for word, and presenting it as your own; “borrowing,” without properly acknowledging the source, paragraphs, sentences, ideas, or even key concepts; and paraphrasing another’s work and claiming it as your own. Additional information about plagiarism and citation rules will be provided during the semester. Exhibiting a lack of academic integrity in any of its varied forms will result in a failing grade.
