Architectural Methodologies

The desire to reevaluate typologies, question programmatic and spatial norms, and formalize ideas are concerns that seem to transcend the different Architectural challenges we encounter. The specifics of site, client, scale, help us carry out these investigations, hopefully arriving at work that is both a product of our continuing concerns, but also unique and appropriate in responding to each specific Architectural problem we encounter. This approach has always been present in our quest to produce Architecture that spans from the creation of habitable spaces, cultural spaces to gather, and urban interventions. Projects that have always strived to elevate the user experience and raise the appreciation for our role as Architects in improving our way of life. This is a presentation of some of our projects that have helped to shape our way of thinking and that can hopefully demonstrate our methodologies in approaching each one of these projects, irrespective of scale and program.

Marios Christodoulides and Christos Christodoulou founded Simpraxis Architects in 2002. The Practice has received numerous awards including the 2019 Architecture State Award for the renovation of Markidieo Theater in Paphos. They have participated in multiple Architectural Competitions and have received ten awards including four First Prizes. They have also represented Cyprus at the Venice Architecture Biennale in 2006 and 2008. Six of their realized projects, including residential and Cultural building, have been nominated for the Mies Van de Rohe European Architecture Award. Marios Christodoulides has been actively involved with teaching having taught Architecture Studios at the University of Cyprus from 2005 and up until 2020. Christos Christodoulou has served as President for the Cyprus Architects Association and is currently a member of the board for ETEK and of the European Architects Council.
