Short Biography

As a young man Kyriacos Kyriacou was very athletic and played rugby. At the age of 15 he had a diving accident which left his hands and legs paralysed. During his rehabilitation at the hospital, he began to paint with his mouth. He attended a private art school and later received private tuition. In 1979 he was granted a scholarship by the Association. Only two years later he became full member of the AMFPA.

His creative work reflects Kyriacos Kyriacou's two spheres of life. On the one hand, the Aegean archipelago is a dominant factor in his paintings. He often depicts the blue boats set off against the white karst coast. On the other hand, he likes to paint the English countryside with its lakes and rivers as well as the typical old English villages and towns with their red brick houses. He mostly paints in oils. Kyriacos Kyriacou has had several exhibitions both in Cyprus and in Great Britain.
