

Reinventing Democracy in the Digital Era

Additional Roles

In addition to the Core Participants and Shadow Participants, the Reinventing Democracy in the Digital Era projects welcomes individuals, professionals and organizations to get involved in the project under the following roles:

Project Promoter, Endorser, Researcher, Policy Advisor/Technocrat, Expert, Mentor, Liaison/Broker, Political Endorsement, Activist.

They have full access to the products of our project (Reports, e-book, Manifesto for the 21st Century Democracy, hundreds of short video clips with the participants explaining their ideas) and they can use and promote them to their local, national or the international community.

They will contribute to the engagement in our democracy reinventing dialogues in ways which suit them and under our full mentoring and support. Future Worlds Center is open for open collaborations and fully willing to agree on tailored-made engagements.

Project Promoters

They can use the products and outcomes of the project through their work, network and their community in a way which will spark further dialogue and development, benefiting their work, their projects as well as their local and national community, or even, the international community.

Project Promoters are also the ones who disseminate the Call for Participants, identifying individuals to participate as Core Participants and give visibility to the project.

Ideal for NGOs, Universities, the Media and Local Authorities.

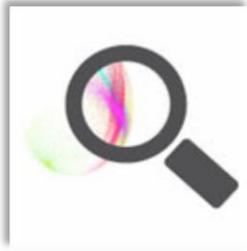

Endorsers

They can use the products and outcomes of the project through their work, network and their community through implementing projects under their auspices or by supporting the project in ways which suit them, benefiting their work, their projects as well as their local and national community, or even, the international community.

Endorsers are also the ones who disseminate the Call for Participants, identifying individuals to participate as Core or Shadow Participants and give visibility to the project.

Ideal for NGOs, Universities, the Media and Public Figures.

Researchers

They can use the products outcomes of the project through their work, network and their community and conduct research, benefiting their work, their projects, the advancement of academic knowledge as well as their local and national community, or even, the international community.

Ideal for NGOs, Universities, Researchers and Scientists who may join in order to analyse the existing data, collect more data, and study the process of the Structured Democratic Dialogue or/and the products.

Policy Advisor/Technocrats

They can use the products and outcomes of the project through their work, network and their community in a way which will support the recommendation of policy reform and the support of stakeholders who work on policy reform, benefiting their work, their projects as well as their local and national community, or even, the international community.

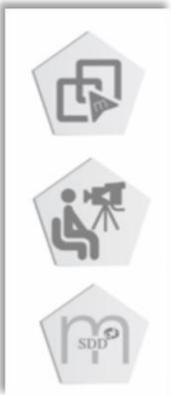

Ideal for NGOs, Universities, the Media, Local Authorities and Politicians.

Experts

They can use the products and outcomes of the project through their work, network and their community by analysing and evaluating the ideas of participants (on a number of dimensions such as Impact, Feasibility, Innovation, Possibility of Happening without intervention/external support, and Desirability) as well as promoting them. Their opinions will be compared and contrasted with the total averages of the evaluations conducted by the participants themselves and discussed if there are deviations. They can also collaborate with participants in the development of ideas. In that way they will benefit the project and its outcomes, their work, their projects as well as their local and national community, or even, the international community.

Ideal for NGOs, Universities, Scientists, Local Authorities and Politicians.

Mentors

They can be assigned to Core Participants and

- empower them to dare to do more (Peer Empowerment and Support Mentors)
- help them reach and use media to promote their messages (Mentors in Digital Communication Strategy and Policy), and
- multiply the project and promote the Science of Dialogic Design (Mentors in the Science of Dialogic Design).

Ideal for NGOs, Universities, Researchers and Scientists.

For more details please check here:

http://reinventdemocracy.info/w/index.php?title=Mentorship_Program

Liaisons/Brokers

This role is for Civil Society or other regional or national organizations interested to liaison and/or organize any related activities such as:

- Organizing local events associated with the vision of the project
- Organizing local and/or theme specific Structured Democratic Dialogues

Political Endorsement

They can use the products and outcomes of the project through their work, network and their community in a way which will endorse the project and commit them to promote its ideas and products, benefiting their work, their projects as well as their local and national community, or even, the international community.

Activists

This role is especially for young or young-in-spirit activists interested to replicate the core activities:

- Organizing local events associated with the vision of the project
- Organizing local and/or theme specific Structured Democratic Dialogues